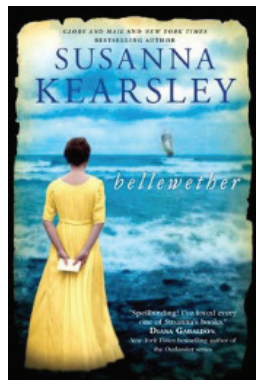
'Big Book Club' to take author to world audience

Imagine being at a book club with the author of the book to provide insights. On Sept. 15, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Haliburton Legion you will have the opportunity to join Susanna Kearsley in a discussion of her latest book Bellewether. The event will be livestreamed with the hope that people from around the world will join in on the conversation, thereby enriching the experience for all.

Kearsley is a New York Times, USA Today, and Globe and Mail bestselling author. She started her career as a museum curator who loves restoring the lost voices of real people to the page, interweaving romance and historical intrigue with modern adventure. Her books, published in translation in more than 20 countries, have won the Catherine Cookson Fiction Prize, RT Reviewers' Choice Awards, a RITA Award, and National Readers' Choice Awards, and have finaled for the U.K.'s Romantic Novel of the Year and the Crime Writers of Canada's Arthur Ellis Award for Best Novel. She lives near Toronto.

"Many people compare Susanna Kearsley to Diana Gabaldon," Marie Gage says, "She weaves interesting tales based on well-researched historical facts. She knows how to provide just the right amount of detail about thoughts and motivation to create an emotional connection with the characters."

The featured book Bellwether will be available through Master's Bookstore at a 20 per cent reduced rate. To get the most out of the event, attendees are encouraged to read it before Sept. 15 and to bring their copy to have it signed at the event. People who have not read the book will also gain from the discussion by others. Copies of other books by Kearsley will also be available at the event.



Admission will be by donation, with a recommended minimum donation of $10. Online participants are encouraged to also donate to the Writer in Residence program through a still-to-be-determined secure process. Generous donations will help fund future, similar events.

Age-friendly master plan praised by George Brown faculty

Haliburton County's Age-Friendly Master Plan is being used as a resource in the activation coordinator/gerontology program at George Brown College. The course is a unique diploma program that teaches the specialized skills required to work with older adults.

Professor Molly Marrack reached out by phone recently to Margery Cartwright, secretary of Aging Well Haliburton County, because she wanted to let the committee know that "we've found your plan to be the best of all those we've surveyed." Marrack said that she and her colleagues were anxious to meet with the local group to further discuss the plan.

The Master Plan was created in 2017 as a joint project of the County of Haliburton, the HKPR District Health Unit and several other community partners involved with older adults. The project was initiated by HKPR health promoter Angela Andrews, the county applied for funding through the Age-Friendly Community Planning Grant, and Kate Hall, consultant, was hired to write the document. Haliburton County council received a prestigious provincial community award for their support of the project.

Aging Well Haliburton County, a volunteer committee of older adults, played a key role in informing the Master Plan. Aging Well has been working steadily to implement the plan with continued support from the local health unit.

Marrack and two colleagues will meet with the Aging Well committee on June 21 in Haliburton. The purpose of the visit will be to get an update on the progress made towards the goals listed in the Master Plan. Discussion at the meeting will include information on two upcoming events being planned by the group – the "Bridging the Gap" Seniors Information Day, Sept. 27 (on how to age well in Haliburton County) and a Housing Summit in October (to address the present county-wide housing crisis).

Thomas Contracting celebrates 85 years in business

CHAD INGRAM
County Life Staff

The Thomas family – from left, Brandon, Keith, Susan and Britt – continue the legacy of Francis Thomas Contracting, the company Keith's grandfather started in 1934. /CHAD INGRAM Staff

It was out of necessity that a young Francis Thomas went into business for himself in 1934.

"The best of what we get out of our family talks, and what Francis had said many, many years ago, was that he had worked for a builder as a young fellow, and the first summer or half-summer he put in, he didn't get paid," says Keith Thomas, Francis's grandson, the current owner of Francis Thomas Contracting. "And things were pretty tight, and he decided he could do it himself. So that's when he started actually doing the work on this own – he had to." Francis was just 15 years old at the time, assisted by his father, Frank, who was in poor health.

Francis began constructing buildings, "as well as a lot of working with horses," Keith says.

"Clearing land, stuff like that," adds wife Susan, seated with her husband and children, Brandon and Britt, in the former house that serves as the company's office along Highway 35 in Carnavon. For many years, the house, built in 1942, was Francis's home, his father living in the house next door. The business has been run from the same property throughout its entire existence, Francis having grown up on Twelve Mile Lake, just south of the village.

"It was all either hand labour, or horse labour," Keith says of his grandfather's work in the early years of the business. "And then in the wintertime, they logged."

Much of that logging took place in the areas around Austin Lake and Black Lake.

"The office that they worked out of up on Black Lake is still there," Keith says, explaining it's used as a trapper's cabin.

Keith's father Allen, the eldest of Francis's three sons, spent his first winter at a logging camp when he was not even a year old.

"As Haliburton County grew, they sort of switched more into looking after the summer people," Keith says, explaining this meant constructing cottage roads, clearing lots and building cottages as cottaging boomed in popularity. The Thomases also cut ice from local lakes. Stored in ice houses, it was delivered to cottagers and resorts. Over the years, the company has moved entire cottages across lakes, whether it be by snowmobile and ATV during the wintertime, or on barges during the summer.

Along with Allen, his brothers Garwood (Bud) and Roger also worked for their father.

"Without those guys, we wouldn't be here," Keith says of his father and uncles.

The introduction of hydraulic technology would mark a major transition for the company.

"I think it was the late '50s, early '60s, when the hydraulics started coming into the world," Keith says. It was at that point the Thomases began pouring foundations, which has become the base of the family business.

"This company is one of the first original three companies in the county that did foundations," Keith says. By the early '80s, the Thomases had ceased framing cottages, concentrating mainly on foundations and site preparation work. "Most of our work is still excavation and foundation," Keith says.

"Basically, we do everything except build the house," says Britt, adding that once a house is constructed, the company returns to do drainage and landscaping work. Thomas Contracting also does septic systems.

In 1994, Keith bought the company from his grandfather. Francis passed away in 2001, and while offices had been gradually added to the house that was once his home, a full remodelling of the building in 2006 turned it entirely into office space.

While Francis had about 12 employees while he was still running the company, today the company has more than 50 employees and a fleet of trucks that can often be spotted along county roads.

For Brandon and Britt, was it always obvious they would one day work for their dad?

"Me, I drove around in the dump truck and the bulldozer out of high school, here," Brandon says.

For Britt, the path into the family business was a little longer.

"I, in high school, wanted to get as far away from the area as possible," she quips. However, after about a six-year stint in Ottawa, she returned to the county in 2012.

After so many decades in business, what is the secret to the company's success?

"I don't know," Keith says at first, thoughtfully pausing. "We've tried really hard to satisfy everybody's needs."

"Over 85 years, we know this area," Britt adds.

In celebration of the anniversary, Thomas Contracting will be hosting a public open house at its Carnarvon headquarters at 15561 Highway 35 on Saturday, July 20.

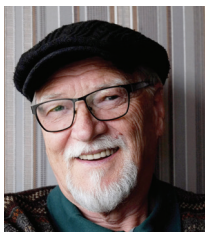
A move of discovery



GEORGE FARRELL
On Arts/Culture

MICHELLE AND I had lived in Gelert for over 30 years. We raised our two sons Brendan and Tyson there. They flew the coop a few years ago, and since then we'd been pondering a move, if for no other reason than a change in scenery. We recently made the move and have ended up in the village of Haliburton; and though the move has proved to be more traumatic than either of us envisioned, we are now settling into our new home on Park Street.

While Gelert offered us many experiences of the natural world – bears, deer, moose and Sandhill cranes are just a few examples – I've been amazed at the proliferation of wildlife in town. Opposite us, on the other side of Park Street, is a little burbling brook, which is now in full flow. And although I imagine in high summer it's reduced to a trickle, at this time of year its waters provide sustenance to an amazing little ecosystem.

Transplanting themselves from people's gardens over the years, the banks on the south side of the brook (and I should endeavour to find out if it has a name) are festooned with forget-me-nots, while honeysuckles of various hues are interspersed among the ferns which also line the banks. I've seen little minnows in the brook, and though I have yet to explore what other creatures are making their home in the waters, and nearby undergrowth, I know I'll find more than one species of salamander.

There are many mature trees lining the brook so the bird songs of springtime are different here than in Gelert, where there is a lot of relatively new growth. It's been wonderful to wake up to the song of a cardinal, and, accompanied by Tyson, who is home for a visit, I recently followed the mellifluous notes of the songbird, while out on a walk. We were rewarded by a brilliant flash of red as the male bird flew away through the pines. By contrast, the female is a relatively dowdy, greenish-buff colour, though both birds are crowned by crests.

In our back yard I've recently noticed sparrows flying into the tall grass. I decided not to cut in the areas where the birds seemed to be nesting. It's hard to get close enough to identify them absolutely, but they looked like they might be Henslow's sparrows, which are an endangered species. Somewhere in the jumble of paraphernalia which represents our recent move, there are binoculars hidden, and I hope to use them before the birds have flown the proverbial coop. The Henslow's sparrow can be distinguished from other sparrows by its combination of chestnut brown wings, black and brown streaked back, intricately patterned olive-green head, and short tail.

I was pleased to discover several Jack-in-the-pulpits along the north side of the brook. Like most people I know very little about them, so I looked online. The internet told me that: "These plants are native to the lower 48 states and parts of Canada. Native Canadians and Americans harvested the roots for food, but they contain calcium oxalate crystals that cause blisters and painful irritations when eaten raw." I never imagined they were edible, but I don't think I'm going to be eating them any time soon.

This part of our county certainly contains a myriad of wildlife, more of which I'll surely discover the longer we live here. Our county is full of interesting flora and fauna, and I urge everyone to discover just what's at their doorsteps and in their backyards.

Top 10 signs it's time to mow the lawn

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

THERE ARE times in your life when you are struck with certain realizations. When things you thought would never come to pass, need doing. With that in mind, here are the top ways you know it's time to mow the lawn.

1. Your dog has been missing for a week.
2. You found out chewing your cud isn't nearly as good as it sounds.
3. You'd like to see the sun again.
4. To get rid of those pesky grazing cattle.
5. People are having a hard time putting.
6. You got lost going to the shed.
7. Crop circles.
8. You've got grass stains on your forehead.
9. The price of hay went up.
10. You miss seeing dandelions.

Ride

Steel wings of cranes scraping slabs of concrete Sky, chafing my eyes,
as I peer out the window at slivers of Sun sliding down glass,
a forest of towers trapping its light, grounding the flight of a pigeon that lands on the rim of a hole, yawning on the side of the road.
The claws of a giant CAT pawing at pavement, gouging the earth, cowering below, as the bus lurches and turns, the blur of feathers and feet straining my eyes, as I watch the throng of people waiting for the lights to blink green, staring down at the screens they cradle in their palms, instead of at one another, or maybe just up at a piece of Sky.
I sigh in my seat in the back of the bus, craving space, craving peace, still hours away from Lakes and hills and Air, pure as forests birthing leaves.
The bus heaves its way through the gridlock of highway,
the glare of lights, the blare of horns, littering Air, as cars crawl their way Home, the sprawl of cement flattening trees, that sprout again, gaining in girth as the bus leaves
the beast of the city behind.
Sky widening as the lanes of highway loosen into road,
my shoulders unclenching as my eyes begin to enjoy the ride,
drinking in grass, drenched green from days of Rain, Sky dipping down to greet the fields, clouds grazing on grass,
soothing my bleary eyes,
that peer through the glass straight into the bloodshot orb of Sun,
its beauty bleeding into the bus,
as the heads of passengers swivel to watch it sink into the forest beyond the fields, the screen of Sky more hypnotizing than the one blinking up from peoples' palms.
For a brief moment, we share, this setting of Sun,
the smears and smudges, the silence it leaves behind,
up in Sky,
before heads bow down again and fingers resume swiping screens.
Dusk cloaking Sky, as the bus purrs along the curves in the road, Lakes shimmering on either side,
as Moon ripens up in Sky,
the space in my chest widening, the higher we climb,
trees replacing towers,
as my Breath tastes the Air through the glass.
The bus lunges around the final bend and we arrive,
the blanket of Sky canopying Lake, its silence punc-tured by a distant loon.
We all peer into the driver's kind eyes, thanking him for navigating our ride,
for steering us back towards forests and Lakes, the screen of Sky, black, but for the glowing face of Moon, illuminating this place that gifts me with space and peace,
envying those whose eyes glimmer with the relief and recognition of returning Home.

Harper makes way for new building

CHAD INGRAM

County Life Staff

Harper Powersports and Marine is embarking on the construction of a new and much larger facility at its Highway 35 property south of Minden.

Demolition of the longstanding building on the property, the former home of Prentice Powersports, began on June 6. Paul Prentice, who sold his business to Harper in 2012, was on hand for the occasion.

As Prentice explained, his father, Bill, who'd been in the road construction business, had begun selling snowmobiles from a Highway 35 property in 1966, alongside his father. That property is where the Hydro One work yard is located today.

In 1969, the family moved the business to the property south of Minden.

"I came back in 1973," Prentice, having left Minden for a period, explains. "Up until then, they just had a very small, little office."

Along with snowmobiles, the Prentices eventually began selling ATVs, Sea-Doos and other watercraft.

"We expanded into the marine business," Prentice said.

Through the 1980s, he ran the business alongside his brother-in-law, eventually becoming the sole owner. Prentice said the wooden building that was coming down earlier this month was constructed in the mid-'80s

Prentice, who even got the demolition underway, was asked if it was difficult to watch the building come down.

"It is and it isn't," he said. "There's a lot of memories, of course. But I'm really proud to see Steve and Dan being successful."

Brothers-in-law Steve Harper and Dan Bursey co-own Harper Powersports and Marine, Bursey serving as general manager. Bursey told the paper the new, 12,000-square-foot building is expected to be ready for Oct. 1. The $2-million project will triple the amount of floor space provided by the former buildings on the property.

Demolition of the former Prentice Powersports building got underway on June 6, with former owner Paul Prentice in attendance to congratulate owners Steve Harper and Dan Bursey on the growth of the business. /CHAD INGRAM Staff

Along with its Minden location, Harper operates a marina along County Road 21 between Minden and Haliburton, and recently purchased the 10,000-square-foot former Sears building along Highway 118 just outside Haliburton Village. Staff will be working from that location during construction at the Minden site.

How long-time volunteer Ronald Mark got his award

VANESSA BALINTEC
County Life Staff

Ronald Mark thought it was a prank when he received a call from the secretary of the Governor General Julie Payette, telling him he won the Sovereign's Medal for Volunteers.

"I felt I didn't deserve it," said Mark. "I was shocked. I thought it was someone pulling my leg. But I was in tears by the time it was over."

The Sovereign's Medal for Volunteers is awarded to Canadian citizens who have demonstrated exemplary commitment to volunteerism. Passion, dedication, and a commitment to community are the driving forces behind those who are awarded with the medal.

"I know what it's like to do without sometimes," said Mark. "I'm just trying to help people."

According to his wife Margaret, the organizations that he volunteers with all sent in letters for his nomination. Members of the Masonic Order at the North Entrance Lodge, the 4Cs, the United Church, and the Shrine Club all worked together with her to nominate Mark without his knowledge.

"It was sometime in 2017 or 2018 ... it took a long time, I know that," said Margaret who volunteers as a librarian for the United Church. She knew right away by his confused tone while on the phone with the secretary that he was talking about the award. "He knew nothing about it. He said, 'Just a minute, I'm going to give you to my wife, she can talk to you.'"

The Masonic Foundation serves as a pillar in his volunteer and community life. He volunteers with its branches such as the Eastern Star and the Scottish Rite, along with the local Masonic lodge, which he's been with since the 1970s, and the Shrine Club since the late '90s. Mark received the William Mercer Wilson Medal, an award for volunteerism in the Masonic community, close to three weeks ago.

Mark has been volunteering his whole life.

"When he was younger, before we had a family, he used to drive [kids with disabilities] down to SickKids Hospital for pool therapy," said Margaret. "Before that he's coached hockey, softball, for boys and girls. He was an equipment manager for a softball league for years, and we stored all the equipment and spent all winter repairing and buying new equipment. We did that for a few years, then we moved up here."

Margaret and Ronald Mark stand beside the Lily Ann Thrift Store entrance on June 7, after Ronald finishes a volunteer shift. Ronald holds his Sovereign's Medal for Volunteers, which showcases an effigy of the Queen. /VANESSA BALINTEC Staff

Despite Mark's love for volunteering, there have been times when his volunteer work has worried his family.

"They sometimes say to him, 'Dad, you're doing too much, you have to learn to say no,'" said Margaret about their three children. "But that's kind of a word not in his vocabulary. I think they've taken some of that [volunteering] from him too."

Although he's been volunteering since he was 18, he said Margaret's support has allowed him to continue.

"She's always encouraged me to do it, too," said Mark about volunteering. "We're going to be married 60 years in October. I don't know how she puts up with me – she should get a medal. Been behind me 110 per cent."

His friendships in Haliburton are part of what he loves about the community.

"This is a great community to live in," said Mark. He's visited Haliburton his whole life, eventually moving to the area with Margaret in 1992.

"I know everybody in town. Everybody cooperates up here, it's great. I love it up here."

Mark thanks the mayor of Dysart et al for presenting his award during the May 28 council meeting, and gives credit to the organizations he volunteers for, for all their help.

"I'm getting to the age where I have to slow down now," said Mark, who's turning 82 in August. "I'm getting old, but I keep going."

Watch for heat warnings this summer

When hot, humid weather hits home this summer, take precautions to beat the heat, the local health unit advises.

This summer, the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit will issue public warnings in the leadup to extremely warm conditions in Haliburton County, Northumberland County and the City of Kawartha Lakes.

A heat warning will be issued when day-time temperatures are forecast to be 31°C or higher, with a minimum day-time low of 20°C or higher, for two consecutive days. A heat warning is also issued if the humidex will be 40°C or higher for two consecutive days. The health unit will issue an extended heat warning when the same conditions apply, but the heat event is expected to last for three or more days in a row.

Notifications will be posted on the health unit's Facebook (www.facebook.com/HKPRDHU) and Twitter (www.twitter.com/HKPRDHU) pages. Information is also available by calling the health unit at 1-866-888-4577, ext. 5006.

"Heat-related illnesses can take a toll on many people, especially infants, older adults and people with chronic conditions," says Melissa Johnstone, emergency management coordinator with the health unit. "If a heat warning is issued, residents are encouraged not to overdo things and instead drink plenty of water and seek out cool places."

During heat warnings, many municipalities open cooling centres where people can visit to beat the heat. Johnstone suggests people contact their local municipality for the locations of cooling centres in their community. People are also encouraged to:

- Avoid going out in the sun or heat when possible.
- Stay cool, and if possible, stay in an air-conditioned place. If your home does not have air conditioning, go to the shopping mall, library, community centre, or friend's house.
- Stay in the shade as much as possible. If you plan to go outside during a very hot day, do so early in the morning or evening when it is cooler.
- Avoid outdoor sports and physical activity.
- Wear loose-fitting, light clothing and a wide brimmed hat.
- Drink lots of water, even if you don't feel very thirsty. Avoid alcohol, coffee/tea and pop.
- Check in regularly with vulnerable family, friends, neighbours and others who could be affected by the heat. These include children, older adults and persons with chronic illnesses. Make sure they are OK and are well-hydrated.
- Avoid heavy meals that involve using the oven or other hot appliances.
- Keep shades, drapes and blinds closed on the sunny side of your home, but keep windows open slightly. If you do not have air conditioning, use fans.
- Keep lights off or turned low.
- Take a cool bath or shower periodically, or cool down with cool, wet towels.
- Never leave a child or pet in a closed, parked vehicle.

Bedside singers soothe and support

SUE TIFFIN
County Life Staff

If you search online for bedside singing choirs, you'll find numerous results from coast to coast in Canada, as close as Peterborough, and throughout the world, in places like Cambodia, Mexico and New Zealand. Shared videos show small groups of people sitting bedside, gently singing in harmony while a person in a hospice room or hospital bed listens, whether they are visibly responsive or not.

The concept of bedside singing is not new, explains Nancy Gosse, Haliburton Highlands Health Services interim hospice co-ordinator, it's been happening throughout time and is now finding a place in Haliburton County.

HHHS is welcoming musically-minded volunteers to join a Bedside Singers group. After training and rehearsal, groups of two or three people from the group will sing, by request, to individuals and groups of residents in long-term care, acute care, and palliative care settings to offer comfort.

"You know mothers with their children, it's the most natural and common practice that people sing lullabies to their children to help them sleep, or family members sing together for enjoyment and bonding at special occasions, birthday parties or family gatherings or weddings," said Gosse. "People enjoy singing together. So having a Bedside Singers program feels like a more natural way of expressing that love and support and caring for each other, in particular when someone is facing death, that it can be a way of connecting them and still helping them identify as who they are as an individual and what they enjoy hearing."

It's not professional music therapy, but sharing song for the benefit of people to enjoy it, explained Gosse, a client-centred approach to offering another aspect of service to support HHHS hospice clients.

"For anyone who has been on the receiving end of hearing a song specifically sung for them, it's an amazing experience," said Gosse. "...To have that experience of people gathered around you and entirely focused on you and singing to you as an individual is very powerful." When you are the person that has the focus of those singers who are coming specifically to sing for you to help comfort and support you, she said, it's a way to connect.

"The senses do decline and hearing, it's very true, someone may be what we might consider to be unresponsive in a way that they can't speak anymore or it may seem that they're not connecting because their eyes are closed or they're not engaging in conversation, but they're very aware. They do hear. They do have a sense of what's going on around them," said Gosse, citing studies done on the vibration of sounds and quality of music suggesting that sound is healing and the vibration of music has a physical and physiological impact on the physical body. "So for somebody who is dying and may not have the ability to communicate in traditional ways they're used to, they can still connect and the resonance of the music can still reach them in a way that's very beneficial to them."

Volunteers, after being accepted through the HHHS volunteer screening process, will train together with rehearsal for about four to six weeks. Gosse stressed that it's an open-ended volunteer opportunity, requiring approximately anywhere from two to six hours a week of time commitment once initial training has been worked through depending on the individual and availability. It will be important that volunteers be able to carry a tune, and to sing together with others.

"It really is from the basis of community supporting one another, and it's about sharing song because that's sort of the most natural form of expression for people to express caring for one another, is to sing together and to be sung to," she said.

Bedside Singers use no instruments, singing a capella, and from a selection of songs that range from being spiritual-based, to folk, to short pop tunes.

"We're specifically finding music that sort of has a soothing quality, that sort of has more of a peaceful, calming message," said Gosse. "In the beginning, we'll be putting together a bunch of music that we think will be good, but what we're hoping will happen is that we'll start to get feedback from the people who are on the receiving end of the songs, and get our clients to say, you know, these are the songs we're enjoying, can you bring more of those, or they may have a favourite that they want us to sing for them. We'll do our best."

Already, Gosse said, there's a buzz about the program, with volunteers signing up to join as Bedside Singers.

"A lot of communities appreciate the value of music but I know Haliburton is very vibrant and rich in terms of its musical heritage, and there are a lot of people involved in music and singing through choirs, or through various kinds of folk arts music," said Gosse. "It's a very thriving community when it comes to music, so in some ways it's a natural fit for this community to offer a program like this, or to offer that as an aspect of what we do, because people enjoy music, people enjoy song."

The growing group, what Gosse calls, "a collection of people from the community, volunteers, who appreciate music and have an understanding of how beneficial music can be, so they want to share that through singing. And to just share that love of music, and just offer soothing and comfort," is meeting every two weeks for rehearsals, with possibly four or five practices before smaller teams are formed.

"I'm very excited about it because personally, I really appreciate how music can affect peoples lives," said Gosse. "So to see something like this happening and to see how excited our volunteers are about being involved, some of the clients that we've chatted with informally about it...everyone is so enthusiastic about this happening, that they can't just can't wait."

For further information about the Bedside Singers program, contact Brigitte Gebauer, volunteer coordinator, at bgebauer@hhhs.ca or by phone at 705-457-2941 extension 2927 or Nancy Gosse, interim hospice coordinator at ngosse@hhhs.ca or by phone at 704-457-2941 extension 2932.

A packed auditorium at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School paid tribute to this year's graduating classes. Among those honoured were: from the left, Susan Milne, Karen Gillespie and James Bennett who were named Ontario Scholars, having achieved and maintained an 80% average in all Grade 13 subjects. For more photos and details of this year's graduation exercises, please see pages 12 and 13.

Nordic ski program receives $150,000 grant

The Ontario cabinet has awarded a $150,000 Lottario grant to the Haliburton Highlands Nordic Trail Association to develop a linked trail system and a competitive course in Haliburton County.

The proposed trail system will cover five municipalities. The total estimated cost of the project is $263,000.

The proposal was presented to representatives of the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation (MTR) in April by a delegation from the area headed by Curtis Eastmure, a member of the association executive.

Also present were Art Ward owner of Wig-A-Mog Inn and Mike Exall, co-ordinator of the outdoor education program at Seneca College and an authority on cross country skiing.

The management board of the MTR unanimously approved the proposal which was then presented to cabinet by Reuben Baetz, the minister of Tourism and Recreation. Cabinet approved the grant on Wednesday June 20.

Following the announcement of the cabinet decision, Curtis Eastmure commented, "We have to give credit to Reuben Baetz and his officials. They were very supportive."

The Lottario funds which will be managed by the MTR will cover planning and management costs and the purchase of track setting vehicles and equipment. The association will be negotiating with local municipalities to provide brush cutters, general labourers and heavy equipment at an estimated total cost of $80,000. It is expected that the project will meet the requirements of federal work projects.

Private corporations will be approached for funding that will cover the costs of office rental, vehicle leasing and directional signs.

At a meeting held this past weekend, Board members agreed that work should begin on the project as soon as possible. It was decided that a consultant should be hired for one year, commencing at the end of July, to design, survey and supervise the construction of the trails. According to Curtis Eastmure, the Association "hopes to have 75% of the trails completed by this winter and the remainder completed next year."

He explained that the project would create approximately 125 km of recreational ski trails and a 25 km competetive course. "The trail will like up five municipalities; Glamorgan, Snowdon, Stanhope, Dysart and Minden," he said, adding that all the areas have cross country trail development except the municipality of Anson, Hindon and Minden which is currently developing a system.

The association plans to bid on the Junior or Senior North American Cross Country Skiing Championship which will take place in the winter of 1986-87 and hopes to stage the World Cup by the end of the decade.

Lutterworth taxes up 3.9%

The Lutterworth Municipal Council has approved the 1984 municipal budget of $1,025,183. The budget was passed at a special meeting held on June 5.

The residential mill rate has been increased by 3.9% to 1.207. The commercial and business mill rate has been set at 1.417, an increase of 3.7%.

Taxes levied by the municipality will amount to $548,714 or 54% of the total revenue.

The Haliburton County Board of Education levy is $332,733 an increase of 4.6%. Of this amount $323,686 will be raised through taxes accounting for 59% of the total taxes levied.

The 1983 surplus of $5,904 will be used to reduce taxes for general municipal purposes to $158,218.

The remaining $66,809 in taxes is allocated to the municipality's share of the County budget.

The Province of Ontario will contribute 81¢ for every dollar of realty and business tax imposed by the township.

The province will provide $246,615 to the Board of Education through the municipality and a further $197,896 in grants and subsidies for municipal expenses.

The municipality expects to collect $31,956 in revenue from other sources such as licence and permit fees, the sale of road allowances and administrative fees.

While senior students at Elementary and Secondary Schools throughout the county were holding graduation exercises, a similar ceremony was taking place for the young students of Bonnie Fitgerald's kindergarten class at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden. Suitably attired with mortar boards and name badges, the pupils received graduation certificates marking their entry to Grade 1.

THIS WEEK

The Times introduces a new summer feature with this edition of the newspaper.

A second section has been added to the newspaper for the summer months. The section, called This Week in the Highlands, will provide information about upcoming events in Haliburton County. It will also feature interesting articles about the area. The television guide, which normally appears with the regular edition of the newspaper, has also been included with the second section.

Some of our readers may have already seen a copy of This Week. The section is delivered to lodges, resorts, campgrounds, restaurants and other tourist related facilities throughout the county. Combined with the newspaper distribution, This Week has a circulation of 10,000 copies.

We hope our readers find this an interesting and informative addition to The Times.
